

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An information processing device has a display for displaying information. A wireless communication device receives data by wireless communication from another information processing device having a display screen for displaying information. A display control device controls the display in accordance with data received from the wireless communication device to display information corresponding to a part of or the entire content of information displayed by the display screen of the other information processing device.

RECEIVED

MAR 04 2007

Technology Center 2600